Bhabhuli lived in a small village surrounded by fields, rivers, and ancient trees. In this chapter, she faced a new challenge and learned an important lesson about courage, friendship, kindness, and determination. As she followed the mysterious wind that seemed to guide her path, she met travelers, helped villagers, solved problems, and discovered hidden stories of the land. Each experience made her wiser and stronger. By the end of the chapter, Bhabhuli realized that true strength comes not from power but from helping others and staying true to oneself. The wind carried her onward toward another adventure waiting beyond the horizon.
